CCSC Alumni – Celebrating the Success of our Past Pupils

Name: Rachel watt
Dates attended: 2012 – 2015
Primary School: Churchfields Primary
Qualifications: Master's Degree in Policing and Criminal Investigation
Current Career: Trainee Police Officer

I attended Newcastle College where I completed my Level 3 Extended Diploma in Uniformed Public Services. After this I got an offer to study a 4-year Masters course at Staffordshire University in Policing. I've held down the same job at McDonald's since leaving CCSC and got promoted to Crew Trainer whilst completing my College studies.

During my time at University, I have achieved a Bachelor of Science in Policing. I have done a variety of activities such as mock crime scene investigations with body worn cameras, practice filling out legal documentations, and completed mock court cases to gain experience in giving evidence in a witness box. I am now working towards getting a placement within Staffordshire Police, as well as mentoring Level 6 students at University completing their dissertation.

Should adults be more like teenagers? Children's mental health has suffered during the pandemic, but experts are confident young people's remarkable brains will survive and adapt.

Could this be the strangest time in history to be a teenager? No other young generation in recent memory has had to spend two years shut up inside, learning alone from a screen, rarely able to see friends or extended family.

So it is no wonder that mental health problems have hit an all-time high among the young. New NHS research shows that one in six 5 to 16-year-olds reported a probable mental health disorder last year - up from one in nine in 2017.

But experts are keen to stress that young people's brains can bounce back even from extreme pressures like the pandemic, because when we are young, our brains are at their quickest and most flexible.

Humans evolved to be adaptable creatures, and we have used this skill to spread ourselves into all of the world's diverse environments: grasslands, forests, mountains, deserts, even ice sheets.

Unlike other species, we have created our own environments to live in: cities and towns, ships, space stations and perhaps in the near future, settlements on other planets.

But to do this, we had to evolve extremely malleable brains that develop during our childhood to adapt to the environment that we find ourselves in. That is why the brain takes much longer to develop than any other organ.

What is the summer solstice?

The solstice marks the beginning of astronomical summer in the Northern Hemisphere.

It translates from the Latin of sol and sistere, meaning sun and standing still, because the solstice gives the illusion of the sun standing still.

During this time, the sun is at the northernmost point from the Earth's equator.
